

I'm a Warrior Now!

by Ananya Kaul

No matter what encourage, elevate, and establish your role,

like a colony of
bees.
You have to socialize,
if you want to win.

Instead of sitting on the bench.

I used to sit there.

But get up
and take your place.
Get the ball, yell,
Hey, Hey, Ball, Ball

I have a real rival
he's been,
is,
and always will be one.

I envy his skill
his handles
his
shots
everything
It only makes me
work harder

Playing for Kansas
is the toughest thing You cant just sit on the bench
waiting to sing
put me in coach

Push yourself
do be the best
the ball is your friend.
The basket
is your home

I made the decision
I play hard
I play A
I play the game
I hustle
I learn
I listen
Im a player now

I yell defense
I yell plays
I yell man
I yell ball
I yell yahhhhh
I hear a swish
I hear the crowds roar
I hear my mom
I hear my dad
their dreams slowly
coming true

I promised myself
to be the best Ill be better than you
even if it means
breaking my chest

I hate the stench,
of that sickening bench
it's looks
it's feeling,
especially when your not sweating
on a bench

The bench of despair.
Call it
whatever you want.

But when you're at my home,
unwelcome,
I'll just say,

GET OUT OF MY HOUSE!

I'm a warrior now!
