

Ode to a Lindor Truffle

by Jessi Jacobowitz

I open your crinkly wrapper,
And find you,
Molded into a beautiful Lindor truffle.
You are a spherical Swiss masterpiece.
My nose detects your creamy cocoa aroma,
Inhaling the indulgence,
I cannot wait.
I bite into your rigid but smooth chocolaty shell.
Suddenly,
Your rich velvety chocolate inside, fills my mouth, leaving my taste buds overly satisfied.
I try to savor your sweet taste,
but you melt away in my mouth
You have come and gone too soon,
But I realize,
Another one of you awaits,
Right before my eyes.
